A message from Hedi Allis, President
Allis Information Management (AIM)

I am very pleased to announce that Allis Information Management, the business intelligence firm I founded more than 25 years ago, has been purchased by three long-time AIM employees: Sue LaBonville, Sandy Warner, and Anne Herron. Together, these new owners bring nearly thirty years of experience to the new AIM enterprise.

As we celebrated our 25th anniversary last year, I was contemplating the future of AIM after I retired. I knew that Ann Buzanowski, my friend and leadership partner for more than 16 years, planned to retire at the same time I did. So when Sue, Sandy and Anne approached me with a plan to purchase the company, I was delighted. I am confident that the company I care so much about will thrive in their very capable hands. The transfer of leadership will be seamless, and the depth and breadth of their collective experience bodes very well for the future of AIM and the clients we serve.

The official transfer of ownership took place today, June 30, 2005. Sue LaBonville joined AIM in 1993, and will step into the role of president. Sandy Warner has been with AIM since 1996, and will serve as vice president, and Anne Herron, who joined the company in 1997, will also serve as vice president.

What's ahead for AIM clients and associates?

- AIM will continue business as usual -- exceeding your expectations.
- No changes in AIM staff; the same knowledgeable teams will continue to deliver outstanding, customized service.
- Key contacts will remain unchanged.

As valued clients, associates and friends of AIM, please join me in offering congratulations and best wishes to the new leadership team:

- Anne Herron

Kindest regards,

Head Honcho--Retired
